Mother Nature's Blood Builder

The Magic of Photosynthesis, one of Mother Nature's most important life building processes, is captured in this green liquid for your body to use in so many ways. In Photosynthesis, the green leaves of trees and plants, "The Blood of Plants," transform carbon dioxide into oxygen. The energy of the sun is converted through electrical energy to chemical energy. Without photosynthesis, there would be no life. The 1915 Nobel Prize was awarded for discovery of Chlorophyll to Dr. Richard Willstatter of Germany.

More astoundingly is the fact that Chlorophyll is one molecule away from hemin, the red constituent of blood. Where the heart of the hemin molecule is iron, the heart of the chlorophyll molecule is magnesium. Since the natural chlorophyll in its growing vegetable form releases oxygen, and since the function of hemoglobin is to carry oxygen and release it in the body tissue, Willstatter suggested that perhaps chlorophyll might be a biological forerunner of hemin, replacing the iron molecule with the heart of the magnesium chlorophyll-derivative.
